

Mystery flower beds while you sleep

Residents of the town of Aldeymarsh in Lincolnshire do not know whether to be alarmed or grateful for a series of visits the town has been receiving during the night over the last month. So far no fewer than eleven lucky householders have woken to find that their gardening has been done for them while they were sleeping.

Tasks carried out included: hedge cutting, weeding, edge trimming and even lawn mowing; most of the homes involved have also had new flowers and shrubs planted. Mother-of two 28 year-old Anna Gagney of Romney Close said that last Tuesday, when she when she went to bed, her front garden was full of weeds. The following morning all the weeds had been removed and she was delighted to find that about twenty substantial flowering bushes had been planted - neatly and expertly - in her previously overgrown flower beds.

Most of the residents who have received the free garden make-overs are delighted with the results. Senior citizen Moses Oakey commented, "I'm amazed at this kindness. You don't usually get something for nothing these days." His neighbour, firefighter Peggy Maloney added, "I can't believe they managed to mow my grass in the dark and I didn't even hear the mower!" But accountant James Fearney does not agree. He said he found it disconcerting that strangers could visit his garden while he was asleep. "These people have trespassed on my property. What's more, if I want flowers in my garden I'll choose and plant them myself."

How the mystery gardeners managed to carry out so many tasks so silently in the dark has baffled local police ever since they were first made aware of the problem by James Fearney. A spokesman for Superintendant Beth Holt confirmed that police are looking into eleven cases of overnight trespass and so far have no leads to go on. It is unknown whether the trespassers, when found, will also be charged with theft of weeds.
