

Unpopular taxes

1635 Charles raised money through taxes. People who were offered a knighthood had to pay money to receive it. If they rejected the knighthood, they had to pay a fine.

The most unpopular tax was the Ship Money. People living on the coast were supposed to pay this to protect them from pirates, but Charles extended it so people who lived far inland had to pay it too.

