Draw both and then write down the comparisons and differences. Complete some research into Victorian toys as we will be creating our own this term. 	PSHE Our PSHE work over the next couple of weeks uses a book by Oliver Jeffers called Here We Are. There is a video on YouTube of a reading of the book https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=A2hmxs8nexc <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Session 1: This session is about making sense of recent events. Draw all the things that play on your mind. This could be things that you are: curious about; confused about; excited about; worried about. After drawing these, write yourself a note of advice and encouragement regarding these thoughts. Session 2: Think of an individual you are inspired by. You can research this to find the person who inspires you most. Then paint this person. After you have painted the person you have chosen complete a short profile on this person, including their name, age and why they inspire you. Session 3: Reread the book. Think about what you have learnt about yourself, others and the world during this period of time. Has the recent experiences changed you or the way you view the world? What do you appreciate now? After reflecting on this, write and illustrate your own note to planet Earth. You can look here for an example of the note Oliver Jeffers wrote: https://clpe.org.uk/clpewordsfortheworld
